Compounding World Asia

2017

AMI and Compounding World magazine are pleased to announce the Compounding World Asia 2017 conference, which will take place on 21-22 September 2017 at the Grand Copthorne Waterfront Hotel in Singapore.

The conference provides a vibrant meeting place for thermoplastics compounders from across Asia and beyond. It will build on the considerable success of the previous two Compounding World Asia conferences, as well as the established Compounding World Forum in the USA and the Compounding World Congress in Europe.

Selected by the editorial team of Compounding World magazine, the event's high-level programme will explore and develop many of the magazine's most popular themes in a live event.

The conference will cover business strategies and new materials technologies, as well as providing practical advice on getting the most from compounding lines.

Its primary focus will be on the production of technical compounds based on engineering thermoplastics, thermoplastic elastomers and performance polyolefins for demanding applications in markets such as the automotive, electrical/electronic, medical and industrial sectors.

Dedicated sessions will focus on the latest additives and formulations for adding value and new functionality to thermoplastics. In addition, there will be analysis of key market trends and opportunities in the compounding industry. Experts will also cover new developments in processing technology and provide tips on how to optimize compounding operations.
